2. Our Policies

Business Conduct Policy

Our Business Conduct Policy \(BCP\) is a comprehensive set of rules for Celanese Corporation and its subsidiaries regarding compliance with applicable laws, the avoidance of conflicts of interest and the observance of our values in the conduct of business. The recognition and observance of human rights, including the avoidance of child labor and forced or compulsory labor or any other forms of human abuse, form a key part of the BCP. The BCP not only binds all employees of Celanese Corporation and its subsidiaries, it expressly encourages third parties engaged by Celanese also to follow these standards.

Third Party Code of Conduct

Celanese's Third Party Code of Conduct is designed to make Celanese's third party business partners, including suppliers, aware of the Celanese's ethical and legal standards for doing business with Celanese. Our Third-Party Code of Conduct makes clear that third parties providing goods or services to or for Celanese are expected to not use child labor, or any form of involuntary, forced, or compulsory labor, including prison labor, slave labor, or labor connected to human trafficking. Third parties are also expected not to knowingly engage in business with any individual or company that uses any child or involuntary labor in connection with any goods or services provided to or for Celanese. The Third-Party Code of Conduct also provides that Celanese has the right to terminate its relationship with any third party that fails to comply with these provisions.

- In our Conflict Minerals Policy we commit to sourcing materials from suppliers that share our highest legal and ethical standards and confirm compliance with the SEC's Conflict Minerals rules.

3. Our Further Safeguarding Measures

Training

Raising awareness of modern-day slavery both within our business and our supply chains is important to us. We are aware that identifying potential and actual cases requires educating employees to understand the drivers of modern slavery as well as the possible indicators. Employees are trained on the detection and prevention of modern-day slavery. Employees also complete a Business Conduct Policy knowledge check and certification of compliance annually to ensure that our ethical values and compliance policies and procedures are understood and implemented at all levels.

Helpline

Anyone, including Celanese contractors, suppliers and non-company persons may use the Celanese Ethics Helpline to report illegal or unethical conduct by Celanese employees or third parties related to Celanese (including suppliers). The helpline is managed by an independent third-party provider and allows anonymous, free of charge online and phone reporting in multiple languages. Its existence is prominently communicated to employees and contractors on a regular basis. All incoming reports are investigated and appropriate remedial actions are taken.

4. Our Supply Chains

Given our global business operations and the conditions of today's globalized world, our procurement structures are designed to efficiently source high-quality production materials and services through global supply chains on competitive terms. Celanese currently procures raw materials, parts and services from over 10,000 suppliers worldwide.

Risk Analysis

In 2019, we undertook an initial analysis of our exposure to the risk of being involved in modern slavery by comparing the findings of the Global Slavery Index (GSI) with our supplier base. In the past year we have increased our focus on modern slavery within our wider business operations, and the supply chains of our goods, and have mapped our supply chains to assess particular industry / sector and geographical risk.

Celanese continues to carefully monitor changes in its supplier base with regards to new suppliers in countries exposed to higher risks regarding modern slavery and consequently determine the appropriate level of due diligence prior to contracting any such new supplier or contractor.

Contractual Supplier Obligations

Celanese's standard supplier contract templates explicitly state that the contracting party must comply with any applicable law, in particular with human rights and regulations related to labor conditions, wages and working hours. Suppliers are also obliged to warrant that their business activities shall not be in contradiction with Celanese's Third Party Code of Conduct. In the case of a breach of these obligations, Celanese reserves the right to terminate the contractual relationship and take further action as appropriate.

Due diligence onboarding process and monitoring

To promote compliance with contractual duties, laws and observance of Celanese's values in its supply chain, we conduct diligence for certain high-risk third parties. Furthermore, after such a business relationship has commenced, Celanese continues to monitor its business partners' conduct to identify any instance of non-compliance with applicable laws or Celanese policies.

Supplier risk evaluations

In 2021, Celanese has implemented a supplier survey which aims to collect sustainability information from the top suppliers by spend, including information related to their supply chain. A Supplier ESG Risk Survey was sent suppliers who represent around 50% of Celanese's annual spend. At the time of the issuance of this statement, responses to the survey are still being collected and analyzed.

Forced Labor

In accordance with the recent implementation of the U.S. Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act, we have examined our supply chain and confirmed that we do not source materials directly from the Xinjiang Province of China, and we do not believe that materials in our Supply Chain are produced using the forced labor of Uyghurs or other persecuted ethnic minorities in China. In addition, we have reviewed the Entity Lists published by the Forced Labor Enforcement Task Force and have determined that no such listed entity is in our Supply Chain. We will continue to be vigilant in our procurement of materials from China, as well as imports from third countries that may contain Xinjiang-sourced raw materials or products, in order to comply with the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act.

Moreover, we have examined our supply chain for compliance pursuant to Section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930, which prohibits products that are mined, produced or manufactured in whole or in part with convict labor, forced labor and/or indentured labor including child labor from entering the United States. Upon review, none of the products that we import are covered by a product and producer and / or country-specific withhold release order or finding issued by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) pursuant to Section 307. We will continue to monitor our procurement materials to identify the risk of forced labor in our supply chain utilizing government-issued lists identifying products and countries where such forced labor is prevalent or has been verified, including the State Department's Trafficking in Persons Report and the Department of Labor's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor.

To that end, the Company complies with applicable laws and regulations regarding the use of forced labor in the United States.

5. Outlook and Next Steps

Honoring our commitment to the objectives of the UKMSA, we are working on the following to further avoid and combat modern slavery and human trafficking in our supply chain:

- In order to meet their obligations with regards to the protection of human rights, our entities in Europe and in particular in Germany are currently preparing for the effective implementation of the requirements of the EU Supply Chain Directive (draft of the European Commission available since February 2022) and the German Supply Chain Act (Lieferkettensorgfaltspflichtengesetz, "LKSG"). By the end of 2023, Celanese Germany plans to have a detailed concept in place on how to address all duties of care required by the LKSG, which will serve as a readiness check for 2024 as well as a blueprint for other European entities.
- Furthermore, we strive to raise supplier engagement and awareness through communication that occurs during the normal course of supplier relationship management.

We understand that the risk of modern slavery is not static and will continue our efforts to further mitigate this risk. In order to assess the effectiveness of the measures already taken, we will review important indicators such as staff training levels, actions to strengthen supply chain auditing and verification, steps taken to educate high-risk suppliers, and any investigations undertaken into reports of modern slavery and respective remedial actions.
